They hurled petrol bombs at police as the president returned to Ukraine from the talks. But EU leaders signalled they had failed to reach an agreement with Mr Yanukovich. The president is due to sign a highly unpopular trade pact with the EU next week. The Ukrainian interim government has threatened to withdraw from the deal if the president does not back down. It also says there will be fresh regional and local elections next Sunday, after officials say pro-Russian separatists seized the regional HQ of the pro-Western government in the east. Asked about the violence, EU Commission President Jose Manuel Barroso said "there is no justification or justification to the violence on the streets". He said the EU would meet on Sunday to discuss the situation in Ukraine. 'Insulting the regime' Speaking at a press conference following the talks in Slovakia, EU Commission First Vice-President Frans Timmermans said: "We were confident we had made progress." But he added that

EU leaders had agreed there was no point in discussing "whether we would help Ukraine or not". image copyright Getty Images image caption Police say they arrested several pro-Russian protesters who tried to storm the Ukrainian embassy in Moscow image copyright AP image caption The talks produced a series of small steps, but no breakthrough But the BBC's

Mark Lowen in Kiev says the main question is whether the president will sign the deal now, with the regional and parliamentary elections on the cards. He adds that the question of whether Russia will try to influence the outcome of the polls through its annexation of Crimea remains unanswered. Ukraine's acting Interior Minister Arsen Av

Gobba Castle – Solar powered castle

Gobba Castle is one of the largest wind turbines in the world. It is constructed in the style of a giant medieval castle with 130 metre high walls and a roof made of glass. Inside the building are cobble gravel floors, a glass atrium and modern day plumbing. Solar panels on the roof of the building power a number of electrical devices. When this is the case, the sun provides all of the energy needed to power the building. There are also three electric cars, these are used as a means of transportation to park the building at the site. Once at the site, the 3 Tesla cars are used to pick up electricity from the ground and use this to charge the battery and provide electricity for the building. These cars have an average range of around 200 km, although they can reach 250 km on their longest runs. The water from the castle's five semi-precious sinkable glass swimming pools are collected and recycled. Plumbing in this part of Japan is a bit unusual as water is used in the baths and from the swimming pools for showers, flushing toilets and even as a garden watering system. The Gobba Castle project was completed in November of 2009. It cost $15 million to build.
